

Laura Chambers named interim CEO of Mozilla

In a remarkable move, one female CEO is passing the baton to another, showcasing a notable moment of leadership transition among women in the corporate world. Mitchell Baker is stepping down as CEO of Mozilla and she writes, "Enter Laura Chambers, a dynamic board member who will step into the CEO role for the remainder of this year. Laura brings a wealth of experience, having been an active and impactful member of the Mozilla board for three years. With an impressive background leading product organization at Airbnb, PayPal, eBay, and most recently as CEO of Willow Innovations, Laura is well-equipped to guide Mozilla through this transitional period. Her focus will be on delivering successful products that advance our mission and building platforms that accelerate momentum. Laura and I will be working closely together throughout February to ensure a seamless transition, and in my role as Exec Chair I'll continue to provide advice and engage in areas that touch on our unique history and Mozilla characteristics." 🎉 Celebrating Black History Month! 🌟🇺🇸

"Where there is love and inspiration, I don't think you can go wrong." - Ella Fitzgerald, a legendary voice not just in jazz but also in the fight for civil rights. As the most celebrated female jazz singer in the U.S. for more than 50 years, Ella faced and overcame discrimination, making her mark as a civil rights activist. Her accolades include the NAACP Equal Justice Award, the American Black Achievement Award, the National Medal of Arts, and the Presidential Medal of Freedom. Let's carry Ella's message of perseverance, love, and inspiration in our professional journeys.

Together, we can overcome challenges and soar to new heights.
